Why Slow Fiber

Man is the only living being on Earth that, in order to survive, has both the need to cover himself and to build himself a shelter ("home"): dressing and furnishing the environment in which he lives are therefore essential needs.

The attention given to food today is much higher than that given to clothing and furnishings.

Consumers lack awareness of what is healthy, clean, fair, and durable when it comes to textile products.

Knowledge of fibers and the complex textile supply chain that precedes the finished product has rarely been focused on the well-being and health of the person who wears or uses them.

What's Slow Fiber

Slow Fiber is a network born from the collaboration between Slow Food and some companies in the textile supply chain that, through their production processes, aim to represent a positive change through the creation of products that are beautiful, good, healthy, fair, clean, and durable

SLOW FIBER

What we do

Vision

Slow Fiber aims to bring about both productive and cultural change in the textile industry.

The project emerged from the collaboration between Slow Food and virtuous companies in the textile supply chain, who seek to represent positive change through sustainable production processes. Our commitment is focused on creating Good industrial models that offer products that are respecting the dignity of both Human Beings and the delicate balance of Nature.

BEAUTIFUL, HEALTHY, CLEAN, FAIR, AND DURABLE

Today, more than ever, it is crucial to transform the methods of production and consumption of the Earth's resources and to spread a new ethos and culture of dressing and furnishing among all its inhabitants. The strength of the Slow Fiber project lies in the companies and individuals involved, who not only advocate for these values but also work concretely to make them possible and tangible. They choose and promote suppliers and partners who share the same values in the supply chain.

Mission

Slow Fiber aims to disseminate knowledge about the impact that textile products have on the environment, workers in the supply chain, and consumer health.

The project, in collaboration with Slow Food, promotes and supports awareness campaigns through the testimony and direct involvement of companies that operate daily with a focus on environmental and social sustainability. Slow Fiber also seeks to protect and promote local supply chains that share the values of Good, Beautiful, Healthy, Clean, Fair, and Durable, thus encouraging other companies to adopt the same virtuous and respectful industrial model that values both Human Beings and Nature.

KPI - Slow Fiber model

Slow Fiber is a network of companies with legal entities representing the entire textile supply chain from fiber to finished product.

We have a founding manifesto, and with rigor and transparency, we have identified key performance indicators (KPIs) and measurement metrics that we want to use to govern the quantitative and qualitative analyses that guide the sustainability choices and pathways of our companies today and in the future.

The KPIs, which intersect the ESG principles with the SDGs, taking into account the European GRI Standards (later EFRAG), have been identified by associating them with the values of the network: Beautiful, Good, Healthy, Clean, and Durable. These metrics represent regulations that can be applied to all companies in the textile industry that wish to join our network.

Values

BEAUTIFUL

A product can have high aesthetic quality without compromising on respect for the environment and humanity. Beauty is also about being healthy for those who wear it, fair for those who work in the supply chain, clean for the environment, and long-lasting.

Values

HEALTHY

We choose to produce while avoiding the use of harmful substances in full compliance with current regulations. Being healthy means paying attention to and respecting people from production to the creation of the finished product, to protect the health of our workers, consumers, and the environment.

Values

FAIR

What is not fair cannot be beautiful. We believe in people and strive to ensure the well-being and empowerment of every individual and their professionalism as an essential resource. This includes providing comfortable, healthy, and safe working environments.

Values

GOOD

Good represents the industrial model we aim to represent by choosing and promoting suppliers and partners who share the same values, such as a connection to the original territory, traceability and transparency of the supply chain, financial stability, and regular sustainability reporting.

Values

CLEAN

Clean means choosing to work with sustainably produced and certified yarns, supporting an authentic circular economy model. We follow methodologies that minimize our impact on the environment as much as possible.

Values

DURABLE

Durability is about timelessness and stands opposed to the concept of fast-use and fast-fashion, aiming to promote conscious and sustainable consumption. As textiles are challenging to recycle, they must be created to last, making high-quality products essential.
